History

The history of Malta is a long and colourful one dating back to pre-historic civilization, after which a succession of conquerors and different cultures took possession of these small but strategically important territories over the centuries.

Heritage and Culture

The Maltese Islands have three sites inscribed on the UNESCO World Heritage List.

1. Valletta the fortress city

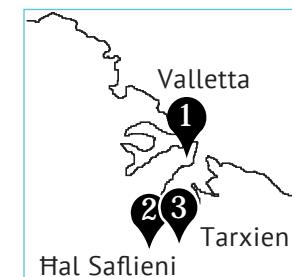

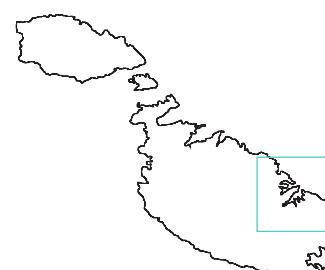

Valletta is named after its founder, the Grand Master of the Order of St. John, Jean Parisot de la Valette. The fortress city grew on the arid rock of Mount Sceberras peninsula, which rises steeply from two deep harbours, the Marsamxett and Grand Harbour. Valletta has been given many labels over the years, all recalling its rich historical past. It is the city built by the Knights of St John; a masterpiece of the Baroque; a European Art City and a World Heritage City. Today, it is one of the most concentrated historic areas in the world.

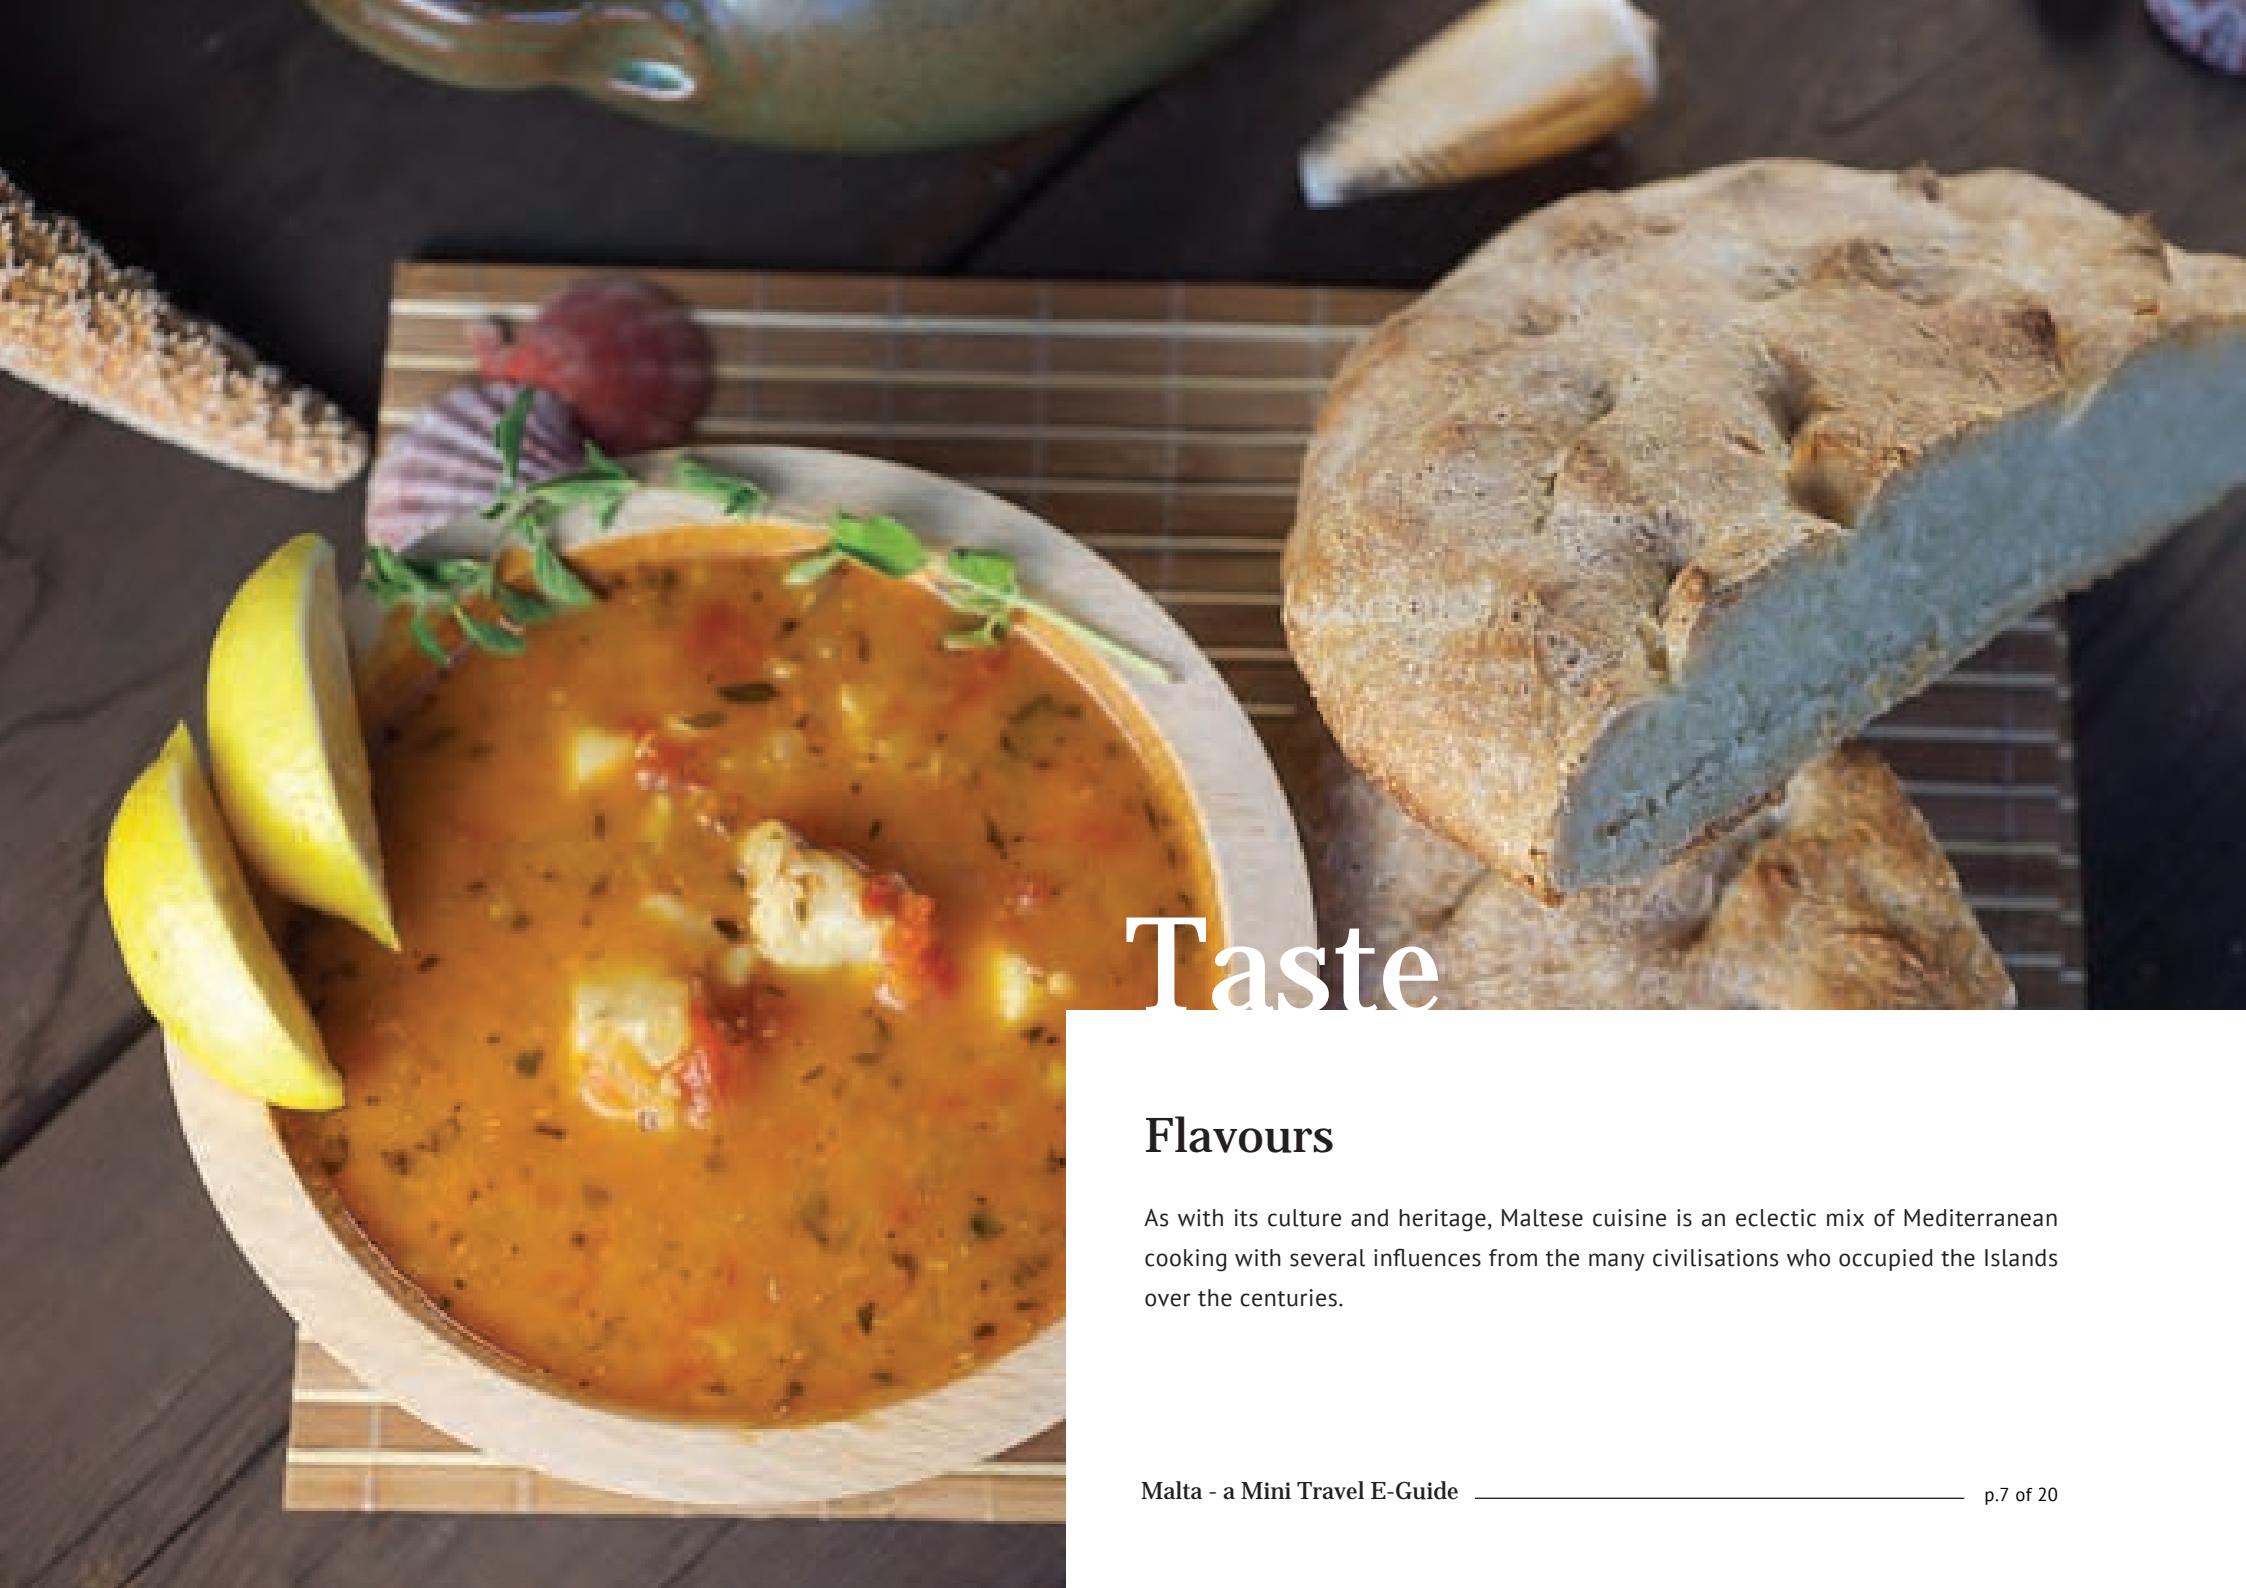

2. Hal Saflioni Hypogeum

The Hypogeum, a labyrinth of underground chambers probably used as both a burial site and a temple, is one of Malta's highlights. Excavation has yielded a wealth of archaeological findings including pottery, human bones, personal ornaments such as beads and amulets, little carved animals and larger figurines.

3. Tarxien Temples

An archaeological complex dating from approximately 3150 BC, the Tarxien consist of three separate, but attached, temple structures. Excavation of the site revealed that it was used extensively for rituals, which probably involved animal sacrifice. Many of the decorated slabs discovered on site were relocated indoors for protection, and can be visited at the Museum of Archaeology in Valletta.

Taste

Flavours

As with its culture and heritage, Maltese cuisine is an eclectic mix of Mediterranean cooking with several influences from the many civilisations who occupied the Islands over the centuries.

Maltese cuisine

Bigilla

A glass of local wine with friends is always best enjoyed with a dish of sun ripened olives, some ġbejniet (local sheep's cheeses), and some bigilla (thick pate of broad bean and garlic) served with galletti (Maltese crackers).

Other snacks not to miss, are hobz biżżejt, made from a thick slice of crusty Maltese bread soaked in olive oil and rubbed with juicy red tomatoes and topped with mint, a little onion, garlic, tuna or anchovies and capers.

Bragjoli

Bragioli is a rich beef dish and a Maltese specialty. The traditional version of the recipe involves a stuffing made with bread - ideally the typical Maltese bread Hobz Malti - as well as bacon, garlic, parsley, and wedges of hardboiled egg - all stuffed inside beefsteaks.

The bragioli is then garnished with sautéed onions, carrot and bay leaves, and slowly braised in a robust local red wine.

Pastizzi

Pastizz (plural pastizzi) is a savoury pastry from Malta. Pastizzi usually have a filling either of ricotta or of mushy peas, and are called pastizzi tal-irkotta, "cheesecakes", or pastizzi tal-piżelli, "peacakes".

On a cold winter's day try the hot ricotta pastizzi which are perfect with a glass of wine or cup of coffee.

Lampuki

Lampuki, in Maltese, or common dolphin fish in English, is a surface-dwelling ray-finned fish found in offshore temperate, tropical and subtropical waters worldwide and very common to Malta.

A trip to the Marsaxlokk fish market on Sunday morning will show you just how varied the fish catch is in Maltese waters. Look out for Lampuki Pie (fish pie) and Aljotta (fish soup).

Imqaret

Imqaret is a traditional Maltese sweet made with pastry and a filling of dates. The word imqaret in Maltese, is the plural of maqrut (diamond shaped) and it signifies the diamond shape of the sweets.

It is very popular in Malta and it is sold in street markets, particularly around religious holidays and village festivals. On hot summer days try it served with ice-cream.

Outdoors

Natural Wonders

In Malta you'll find there are plenty of natural attractions. The Azure Window, the Inland Sea and Fungus Rock - a trio of natural wonders located within a few meters from each other in Dwejra, Gozo - are absolute must-sees. There are also caves and grottos with interesting rock formations to discover.

1. Blue Grotto - Outskirts of Qrendi, Malta

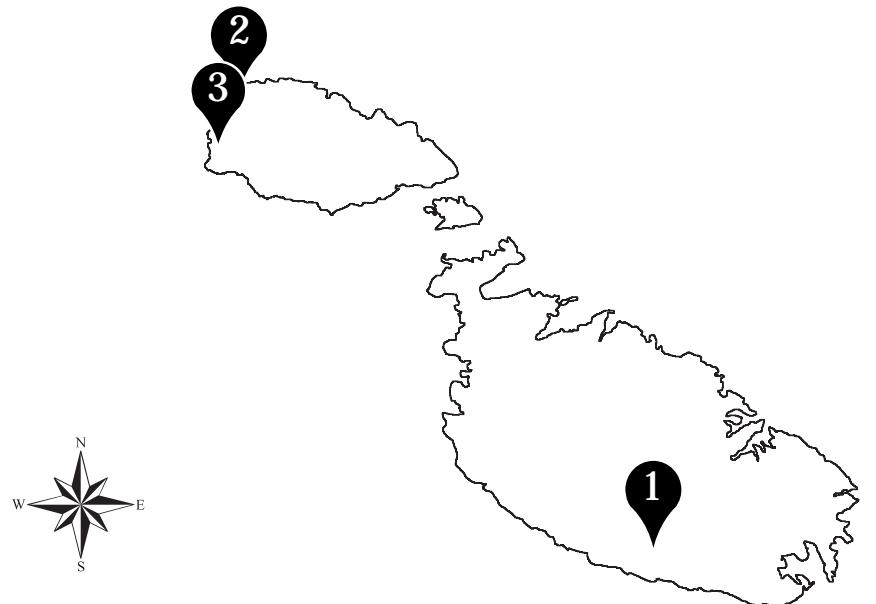

A number of caves, including the Blue Grotto, which is the biggest one, can be reached by boat from Wied iz-Zurrieq, on the outskirts of the town of Qrendi.

2. Azure Window - Dwerja, outskirts of San Lawrenz, Gozo

One of the most photographed vistas of the Islands, particularly spectacular during winter when waves crash high inside the arch.

3. Fungus Rock - Dwerja, Gozo

A small islet in the form of a 60 metres high massive lump of limestone in Dwejra, on the coast of Gozo. It is called Fungus rock due to the discovery of the common Malta fungus growing on the rock's flat top by the Knights of St. John. Thought to have medicinal properties the Knights used it for dressing wounds and cure dysentery.

Adventure & Outdoors

Best for:

1. Diving

One of the top spots for diving in Malta is The Inland Sea. A lagoon of shallow seawater on the island of Gozo, linked to the Mediterranean Sea through an opening formed by a narrow natural arch, the Inland Sea was elected by ocean explorer Jacques Costeau as one of his top ten dives!

2. Climbing

The rocky terrain and sheer cliffs that characterise much of the Maltese archipelago make it ideal for practicing rock climbing. There are over 1300 climbing routes to choose from, and of course, with good weather throughout most of the year, the Maltese Islands are renowned as a climber's paradise.
